Membership at Spokane Public Radio

THANK YOU for supporting SPR! Times are changing and we are too, with new staff, programming and diverse ways to participate in the success of SPR. Our strength depends on you. Your ongoing support is vital to the health of this station. Steady funding allows SPR to continue to bring you the programming and events you have come to expect.

Have you considered becoming a Sustaining Member? Monthly giving is quick, convenient and provides a predictable source of income for SPR. On-Air pledge drives are no longer our main source of fundraising. Monthly supporters are essential to SPR!

Please consider one of the many ways to give this upcoming year. Whether you become a Sustainer, with an on-going monthly gift, give a gift of stock, utilize your IRA RMD, or donate a vehicle, we have an option that will meet your giving needs. For more information please give us a call at 509-328-5729 or visit our website at www.spokanepublicradio.org/membership.

The Guide

Your Connection to Spokane Public Radio
Volume 43 / No. 3 July to September 2023

What's new, back and better?

If you're a regular listener of KPBX's weekly Thursday Arts (P)review, you'll know that we periodically feature interviews with new crops of Spokane Arts Grant Award (SAGA) recipients. However, one recent recipient has had to go without a TA(P) interview — us! The Radio Play Co-Lab project we launched late last year was fortunate enough to receive its own SAGA funding during the first round of 2023.

Radio Play Co-Lab was conceived as a community-wide creative effort. Along with staff at SPR, it involves Spokane Playwrights Laboratory, Purple Crayon Pictures, students from Spokane Falls Community College and many others. SAGA funding is allowing us to pay the writers, actors, directors and sound design crew a stipend for each play, as well as covering the station's overhead costs.

Radio Play Co-Lab currently has several bespoke one-act radio plays in the works, two of which are planned to air in mid-July: A Dead Mouse on Your Doorstep by playwright and filmmaker Malcolm Pelles, and Mea Culpa by Spokane Civic Theatre's playwright in residence Bryan Harnetiaux. Keep an eye on our website and social media for those broadcast dates.

As for other arts programming, we're also gearing up to relaunch our popular Arts Calendar, which, for obvious reasons, went dormant during the pandemic. Consequently, SPR is looking for a part-time arts production assistant. Head to the Employment Opportunities page on the SPR website to see what the position entails.

Once the Arts Calendar has made its return, KPBX listeners will get brief updates throughout the day about imminent concerts, gallery exhibitions, theatrical openings and other arts-related activities from across the region. The arts scene is really hopping, and this should help you, our listeners, keep better tabs on what's happening and avoid the disappointment of hearing about events after the fact.

On top of that, the SPR performance space—the locus for all of our live performances on From the Studio and Piano Bench, not to mention special events like MusicFest Northwest and Composer's Forum—just got a big upgrade. Eight acoustic banners were installed on the north and west walls. These banners unfurl at the press of a button to dynamically change the acoustics of the room. Not only will this allow us to capture our performers with more fidelity, it'll also allow us to host a wider variety of musical guests in the performance space. More on that in a future Guide, I hope.

- E.J. Iannelli, SPR Arts and Music Director

Masterworks 1, A Place Called Home

September 16 & 17

With conductor James Lowe, bass-baritone Derrick Parker, and singer Sulustu (Barry Moses), the Spokane Symphony asks the question, what does "home" mean for us? The music performed this weekend explores what it means to feel a sense of belonging — or not — from the homesickness of the immigrant Dvorák to a Salish Language hymn via Copland's boisterous Americana.
